ISRAEL EXPECTS ONE THOUSAND JOURNALISTS FROM ALL OVER AT EICHMANN TRIAL

Adolf Eichmann will be tried in Israel by Israeli judges, and not by an international court, says the Israel Digest, of Jerusalem. This was repeated by Pinhas Rosen, the Minister of Justice, in an interview with the Panim el Panim weekly. Mr. Rosen said that judges from abroad would no doubt attend the trial, but they would do so only as observers. They would not be officially invited but the Government would announce that foreign judges could be present as observers if they so desired. Any judge who submitted credentials showing that he represented a particular country would be enabled to attend.

Referring to the recent visit to Europe of Commander Abraham Selinger, head of Bureau 06, which is assembling the evidence against Eichmann, the interviewer asked whether there was not sufficient material in the archives of the Yad Vashem Memorial Authority and the Lohamei Hageta'ot (Ghetto Fighters) settlement, which maintain records of Nazi crimes.

The Minister replied: "We already have sufficient material to indict Eichmann, but we are interested in expanding the scope of the indictment and proving that Eichmann's plans covered the extermination of the whole of World Jewry, as well as the fact that he was personally responsible for the execution of the extermination policy.

"The documents submitted by Yad Vashem to Bureau 06 include 120 express orders by Eichmann in connection with the extermination. They have also supplied the minutes of the history meeting of the Nazis on January 20, 1942, in which the final decision was taken on the plan for exterminating the Jews in all the countries occupied by the Germans.

"It appears from these minutes that this was a full meeting of the German Cabinet, to which Adolf Eichmann's plan for the extermination of the Jews was submitted. At the same meeting it was also decided that Eichmann should be in charge of the execution of the plan.

"I have seen with my own eyes a document, which will probably be submitted at the trial, which shows that Eichmann prevented the transfer of 10,000 Jewish children from Rumania to a neutral country.

"I was shocked when I saw another document containing a demand by Eichmann to transfer to the death camps 40,000 Jews from France; 40,000 from Holland; and 10,000 from Belgium."

On the question of the date when the trial might take place, Mr. Rosen said: "It is difficult to fix the exact date at the moment. It all depends on the development of the inquiry and the time it takes. The police are engaged in preparing the material and submitting it to the Attorney General. At present the investigation is still in the early stages, and only when it is completed will the indictment be framed. The accused will then be informed of his rights in conducting his defense. It is already clear, however, that Eichmann will be entitled to demand a preliminary hearing before the actual trial takes place."

Taking everything into consideration, the Minister believed that the trial would open round about March, 1961. It would probably be held in the Jerusalem Beit Ha'am (People's House), which was approaching completion. The building would contain a hall with accommodation for 800 people, as well as a second hall which would presumably be placed at the disposal of the press. Journalists would also be able to follow the trial through a closed television circuit.

Over a hundred foreign journalists had already applied for facilities to cover the trial, but the number was expected to reach a thousand from all parts of the world.

Commander Abraham Selinger, head of Bureau 06, returned to Israel after a tour of several European countries in connection with the Eichmann case. Speaking at a press conference after his return, Commander Selinger said that the investigators would travel to Eastern Europe as soon as the visas they had applied for were granted.

He said he had found "very interesting" documents in government and private archives in France, Britain, and Holland, and thought other relevant documents were available in Eastern Europe. The time it would take to prepare the file against Eichmann depended largely on how quickly evidence could be gathered abroad, he continued. They did not plan to visit Germany in the near future, he said, as the post-War occupation forces had removed most of the archives relating to the Nazi period.

In France, he met with M. Henri Monferny, who represented France on the prosecution team at the Nuremberg trials. In Britain, he met with the authors, Gerald Reitlinger, who wrote the book "The Final Solution;" and Dr. George Adler, who wrote about the Theresienstadt camp, where Eichmann made his last "public" appearance before going underground in 1945.

Lord Russell, of Liverpool, arrived in Israel for a ten-day visit as guest of the Foreign Ministry to gather material for a book and articles on Eichmann's role in "the program for the final solution to the Jewish problem." After the Second World War, Lord Russell was Deputy Advocate-General of the British Army of the Rhine, where he was responsible for prosecuting all war crimes committed in the British Zone of Germany. He later wrote the well known book on Nazi war crimes, "The Scourge of the Swastika".

Lord Russell told an Israel reporter that he regarded the holding of the trial in an Israel court as historic justice, and he thought that this was the opinion held by the majority of people, "people not concerned with legal niceties."

Robert Servatius, of Cologne, Germany, the counsel chosen by Eichmann, or any other foreign lawyer, will be able to defend Adolf Eichmann for pay before an Israel court, according to a special amendment to the Lawyers Ordinance (1938) which the Cabinet decided on July 24 to submit to the Knesset for its approval.

The new amendment would authorize the Minister of Justice to qualify for practice in an Israel Court a lawyer who is not included in the Israel Lawyers Register. The amendment would apply only to particularly serious crimes, tried under the Law for the Punishment of Nazis and Nazi Collaborators. The Cabinet charged the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice with working out the final text of the amendment.

Inter-Faith Body Drive Is Increased To Restrict Anti-Catholicism In U. S. Election Campaign

The president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, a former president of Rutgers University, said that the N. C. C. J. recently stepped up its program to keep anti-Catholicism at a minimum in the election campaign, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Jones said, that he sent out a message to the organization's sixty-four regional offices warning that "we cannot allow the religiously prejudiced to distort the issues or to defile our democratic election procedures."

Interviewed about reports of widespread, virulent hate literature which has been circulated in parts of the South against the Roman Catholicism of Sen. John F. Kennedy, the Democratic Presidential candidate, Dr. Jones expressed surprise that the religious issue had reached so high a pitch so early in the campaign.

His statement asked regional offices to remind all voters in the coming national, state, and local elections that "any statements for or against any candidate based on religion is contrary to American principles."

In the 1928 campaign, when Al Smith was villified by the Ku Klux Klan and various hate groups and individuals, votes were cast against "the highest officer of the Republic" on grounds that "no fair-minded person could defend," Dr. Jones said.

It was out of the anti-Catholicism of that election that the N.C.C.J. was organized to keep politics free of prejudice. During the campaign, Smith battled a barrage of scurrilous pamphlets, anonymous letters, whispers, and lies that was without parallel in previous campaigns, says the New York Herald Tribune. "Since 1928," Dr. Jones commented, "a new generation of Americans has grown up which has shown signs of understanding the deep relations between religious tolerance and true democracy."

The entire world is watching the Presidential contest between Sen. Kennedy and Vice-President Richard M. Nixon, Dr. Jones observed, depicting the religious issue as a "menace to our national unity. We're in a crisis," he said, and the test of religious freedom is a focal point."

Discussing the intensity of the current hate campaign, Dr. Jones said his records showed it was "somewhat more open" than the one thirty-two years ago, and about "the same in emotional pitch as it was in the South when Smith ran for President. The Southern Baptist Convention and Masonic orders have been named as leading the anti-Catholic fight.

"It's meeting with considerable protest, too, and I suspect there will be a strong reaction against it, because there is a great diversity of opinion among Protestant ministers," he said.

Protestant theologians such as the Rev. Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr and the Rev. Dr. John Bennett Dean, of Union Theological Seminary, in New York, as well as "pastors all over", do not "countenance" the anti-Catholicism of the campaign "at all," the interfaith leader said. But such opponents are frequently individuals who are not organized in the same way as anti-Catholic groups are, he continued.

"The thing that really disturbs me are the deep scars religious leaders are inflicting upon each other in this campaign," Dr. Jones said, to the New York Herald Tribune. Because religion has become so bitter so early, compared with violent outbursts in the last two weeks of the 1928 election, "it may get talked out," Dr. Jones said.

The N. C. C. J. brought some of its people in to New York headquarters from the field to increase its anti-bigotry efforts. The organization, with a $3,000,000 annual budget and 12,000,000 persons on its rolls, he said, already has worked closely with the bipartisan Fair-Campaign Practices Committee to combat religious intolerance.

New Z.O.A. Head Defends Need For Zionist Movement

The newly elected head of the Zionist Organization of America called for a strengthening of the world Zionist movement to achieve a closer spiritual and cultural relationship of Jews the world over.

Max Bressler, of Chicago, Illinois, who was elected president at the closing session of the organization's sixty-third annual convention at the Statler Hilton Hotel, in New York, emphasized that this close relationship would result in intensified moral and financial support of Israel, says the New York Times. Mr. Bressler, who has occupied key positions in the Zionist movement and in fund-raising structures on behalf of Israel, succeeds Abraham A. Redelheim, of New York.

The convention voiced sharp criticism of the Arab boycott of American concerns doing business with Israel. The delegates voted to establish a committee that would take "all appropriate legal measures to combat the boycott and blacklisting."

The convention also asked the United States and the United Nations to "take positive steps to enforce the principle of free passage through the Suez Canal."

A budget of $1,500,000 was adopted to carry out the Zionist Organization's program in America and in support of its projects in Israel.

In an appeal to former Zionists who had left the movement "in the mistaken belief that there is no need for continued existence of Zionism" because of the establishment of Israel, Mr. Bressler stressed that the Zionist movement must play the dominant role in supporting Israel, says the New York Times. The movement, he said, "must expand and intensify on every noble expression of Jewish living, the Hebrew language, our folkways and our ethics, our Bible and our literature, our links with our people everywhere."

Mr. Bressler called for strong opposition to "the indoctrination of American Zionists with the belief that Jewish community affairs in America are beyond the concern of American Zionism and virtually the monopoly of non-Zionists."

Began Free, Non-Sectarian Good Will Court

Nathan Sweedler, a former Municipal Court Justice, died in Brooklyn Jewish Hospital after an illness of three weeks. He was 75 years old and lived at 194 Crown Street, Brooklyn. Mr. Sweedler, founder of the former Good Will Court in Brooklyn, had long been a leader in philanthropic, educational, and Jewish religious activities in Kings County.

He founded the Good Will Court, as a free, nonsectarian tribunal for the amicable settlement of disputes, in 1927. It heard thousands of cases without charge before its discontinuance during World War II.

Born in New York, he received his law degree from Brooklyn Law School and was admitted to the bar in 1908, says the New York Times. Two years later he became a partner in the law firm of Herzfeld & Sweedler. He was named counsel to Sheriff Herman Hessberg, of Kings County, in 1929.

The same year he was elected on the Democratic ticket to the Municipal Court bench in the Sixth District, Brooklyn. He served until 1940. Later he was an assistant attorney under then District Attorney William O'Dwyer, of Kings County. Subsequently he returned to the private practice in partnership with a daughter, Mrs. Beatrice S. Andron, at 225 Broadway, Manhattan.

Mr. Sweedler served as a special referee of the Supreme Court in Kings County by appointment of the Appellate Division, and also as a referee of the Kings County Surrogates Court. During World War II, he was general counsel for the Eastern States Independent Slaughterers and Meat Packers.

He was a former president of the Hebrew Educational Society of Brooklyn, former chairman of the Brooklyn division of the Jewish Educational Association, and former administrative chairman of the Brooklyn division of the United Palestine Appeal, says the New York Times. He had served as a trustee of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies; and as chairman of the civic service committee of Brooklyn Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Bank Of Montreal Rated First For Advertising

For the thirteenth time in the past 15 years, the Bank of Montreal has been rated first for advertising among the nine Canadian chartered banks, according to a continent-wide survey by Vincent Edwards and Co., in New York. The B. of M. also placed second among the 15,000 banks of North America, immediately behind the Seattle-First National Bank. The results of the survey of bank advertising in the past 12 months appear in the annual "Bank Ad-Views" review of Canadian and U. S. financial advertising.

Only twice in the past 15 years has the B. of M. failed to take first place for Canadian bank advertising, and has received a "Socrates Award" every year. In 1946 and 1954, the B. of M. received the "Socrates High Award of the Year", as top bank advertiser in North America.

From The Pisgah Of Forty Years Of Histadrut

BY RABBI JACOB J. WEINSTEIN, NATIONAL CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE FOR LABOR ISRAEL; LEADER OF K.A.M. TEMPLE, OF CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

It is the special genius of the Jewish New Year that it induces even the average citizen to become philosophical and introspective, not only about himself but about his causes. The fortieth anniversary of Histadrut offers a very special incentive for both an inner and an outer look. Forty is a favorite number in our tradition. Forty is the number of days and nights of the Flood; forty the days of Elijah in the desert before the inward revelation of the "still, small voice"; and forty were the years in which the mixed multitude that came out of Egypt were drained of the hunger for the fleshpots and made ready for the responsibilities of freedom and self-government.

So, too, have the four decades, in which Histadrut has grown from a small band of visionaries to the most effective instrument of social democracy in the Middle East, been years of cleansing and vital growth. In these years the multi-faceted Histadrut has sweated out of its pores unassimilable material, whether it be the incandescent philosophical anarchism of an A. D. Gordon, or the too-tightly structured equalitarianism of a Borochov. It was the period in which the members of Histadrut learned that reality bends all ideology to its necessities.

In the course of learning this sometimes bitter truth, the pioneers gave up some of their inherited attitudes toward bourgeois fetishes as administrative order, planned production, individual incentive, and military defense. It was a period in which some of the frozen gestures inherited from the "Kulturkampf" of the Pale of Settlement had to thaw out and give way to a toleration for those who needed the assurances of eternity to keep them loyal to the cause of improving life on earth. And in the last decade, the men and women of Histadrut have faced a new challenge: the giddy provocation of success and the corruptive temptation of power.

Moses found it necessary to let the generation born in Egyptian slavery die out before he could create a nation of free men from its children. We witness the miracle, almost as incredible as that of the splitting of the Red Sea, of a people always in the marginal position of an idealistic minority moving into the central position of power and yet holding fast to the core of its idealism. The concessions which Histadrut now makes to private enterprise on the one hand and to the more all-embracing collectivism on the other are concessions made out of strength and certainty; the strength and the certainty of a labor movement which has assumed a task unprecedented for a labor movement: the national rehabilitation of a people and the revival of a long neglected land.

Nowhere in the tortured history of western man's attempt to achieve a workable balance between the one and the many; freedom and order; personal liberty and social security; have we seen so many creative syntheses as are now in practical effect in Israel. We had thought that all these social mutations had been played out on the stage of history, with the mir and the guild, the innumerable idealistic sodalities, the Christian Socialist movement, the Scandinavian Cooperatives, the Rochdale system, and the various improvisations of the Social Welfare State.

But a study of Israeli cooperatives, in the framework of a Social Democratic state and a labor movement that has predominant political power and a sizeable economic investment in the basic industry of the land, reveals new, emergent, creative solutions to many problems which have often been considered insoluble. Students of collective bargaining have already noticed the constructive gains inherent in a situation where the negotiators on both sides of the table have had actual experience both in the field of management and of labor, since it is quite common for a member of Histadrut to represent labor at one time and then later be transferred to a managerial position in one of the Histadrut enterprises.

Still, life only begins at forty! Histadrut faces its fifth decade fully conscious that the military defense of Israel is still a prior obligation and the expansion of its economy equally urgent. It is as strongly committed as ever to make the Negev blossom as a rose and to ring the border areas with strong fortresses of working settlements. While the idealism of the early decades has taken on some of the ineluctable sobriety of age, there still remain great reservoirs of noble enthusiasm in the youth of Histadrut. Where once they considered the military hero as the paragon of virtue, they have now transferred a large part of their adoration to the soil chemist, the researcher in solar energy and the desalination of water.

In a land where Moses was in full vigor at 120, forty is the age of youth and the time when one mitzvah compounds another. And so Histadrut has recently assumed another heroic role. It may prove to be the most seminal of all its roles. It has undertaken to share its know-how with the young, nascent nations of Asia and Africa. The success of the Afro-Asian Seminar, under the brilliant direction of Reuven Barkatt, encouraged Histadrut to suggest to the AFL-CIO a partnership in the sponsoring of a more permanent Institute for the training of labor leaders and cooperative administrators in Tel Aviv. The American trade union movement, mindful of a long and pleasant history of cooperation with Histadrut, generously agreed to this partnership and now the Afro-Asian Institute for labor studies and cooperation, under the joint chairmanship of George Meany and Eliahu Elath, is a reality.

Hundreds of young Asians and Africans will be taught the precious knowledge which Histadrut has gained in the sweat and blood of these forty years. They will see with their own eyes that a western people can develop the resources of a backward area without imposing economic bondage or political tyranny on the natives. They will observe a western people which has become color blind by the good fortune of an historic

FOR NINETEEN SIXTY-ONE

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

A NEW INSPIRATION FOR THE MOTORING WORLD

You are looking at the completely new Cadillac for 1961—a motor car that will inspire the automotive world for years to come.

While unmistakably Cadillac in stature and in majesty, it represents a totally new concept in fine car design and engineering.

Its graceful silhouette reveals less overall length and increased headroom. Its delicately formed roof lines provide an almost uninterrupted panorama of vision—while a crisp, new sculptural design of front, rear and sides confers on it a degree of distinction that is entirely new to motoring.

Beneath this visual elegance resides a host of dramatic engineering advancements—an even finer, quieter and smoother-performing engine . . . an entirely new front suspension system . . . a lubrication-free chassis . . . wonderfully improved steering and braking . . . and greatly increased manoeuvrability and handling ease.

This new world of motoring pleasure has been interpreted in eleven individual body styles—each with an exceptionally wide selection of beautifully crafted and appointed interiors . . . and an unusually generous choice of accessories, fabrics and colors.

Your dealer will be proud and privileged to introduce you to the entirely new 1961 Cadillac at any time. We sincerely believe that you will find it an inspiration in motor car quality and goodness.

A Visit To Eichmann's Jail In Israel

BY LEO HEIMAN, WRITING FROM HAIFA

I was the first newspaperman to visit Adolph Eichmann's jail. I may not say precisely where it is, except that it is a British-built police fortress located somewhere in the north of Israel. Its code-name is "Camp Iyar," Iyar being the name of the Hebrew month during which the secret operation which led to Eichmann's capture was carried out. (This undercover operation is likewise known by the code-name "Action Iyar.")

Travellers who pass "Camp Iyar" from the road see only the top towers of what looks like an ordinary police station rising from the lush green of the countryside. But heavily armed police patrols screen the entire area and passers-by are warned not to loiter more than a few seconds. Additional guards with machineguns and searchlights are posted in watch-towers and on top of the wall which surrounds the fortress compound. Inside the outer courtyard, heavy mesh-wire fences, guarded by police dogs, crisscross the path leading to the main building.

To gain entrance here, the visitor must pass a quadruple chain of controls: first, the patrols which screen the countryside and roads; then, the guard at the steel-plated main gate; then, the courtyard guards with their dogs; and finally, the inside guard who unlocks the heavy steel doors. But once inside the main building, it would be easier to be admitted into Nikita Khrushchev's office in the Kremlin than to the padded isolation cell where the top Nazi war criminal sits writing his memoirs and confession notes.

The fortress building itself is divided into several parts: administration and guard rooms; investigation and interrogation rooms; office space and laboratories; archives; kitchens and service rooms; and — finally — the isolation wing where Eichmann is kept. Each part is shut off from the rest by a series of steel bars, automatic trap-doors and sliding gates. At least five separate checkpoints must be negotiated before penetrating the inner sanctum of Eichmann's detention. A different unit of guards is locked in together with the prisoner, remaining inside the isolation wing 24 hours a day, seven days a week, without any contact with the outside world.

The guards for this strenuous duty were handpicked from among the special security service branch of the Israel police headquarters, veteran detective units, and criminal investigations divisions of all police commands and districts. All who were selected had to meet the following conditions: Oriental parentage (Iraqi, Yemenite, etc.), so that they would have no knowledge of German or Yiddish, no relatives massacred by the Nazis and hence no personal motives for vengeance; unhampered bachelor status, so that they could stay with the prisoner at all times; approval by a psychologist to vouch for their emotional equilibrium.

In charge of this special detail is an old sergeant-major of the Israel police. He was born in Germany and is the only one of the guards who speaks German and with whom the prisoner is allowed to communicate. If Eichmann wants to use the washroom, get a book or some writing paper, he addresses himself to the sergeant-major. The other guards are under orders to ignore Eichmann when he talks to them.

Incidentally, after a few weeks in prison, Eichmann suddenly began speaking Hebrew. Not a fluent Hebrew, to be sure, but not so bad either, and certainly no worse than the Hebrew spoken by many new immigrants. He explained that he used to take Hebrew lessons, some 23 years ago, from a rabbi (later murdered) who was a prisoner of the Gestapo in Berlin. "I forgot my lessons entirely, but after I heard you talking for a couple of weeks, it all came back to me," Eichmann told his startled guards.

The sergeant-major sleeps on a cot in Eichmann's cell, in which a ceiling light burns day and night. The cell is padded with foam rubber mattresses three inches thick and eight feet high. The single narrow window is barred and completely boarded up from the outside, except for a thin half-inch slit on top. When the pencil-thin shaft of sunlight moving along the wall opposite the slit disappears, the prisoner knows that it is nightfall.

Because the cell is hot and stuffy, ventilation equipment and an air-cooler have been installed outside the boarded-up window. The ceiling light can be switched on only from the outside. Eichmann's bed is a simple army cot, with a straw mattress, three blankets, small pillow and two white sheets, which are changed regularly. He wears a khaki prison uniform, without belt or suspenders, and soft brown shoes without shoelaces.

Leaning against the wall under the window is a small bookshelf crammed with German novels and short stories. Eichmann receives about five new books a week from the police. He is allowed no newspapers, magazines, or mail privileges. It goes without saying that he never knows what time it is, or even what day it is. He is not allowed to keep track of the passage of time by scratching marks into the wall as prisoners everywhere do. He does not know where he is, except that he is in an Israeli prison.

The chief duty of the sergeant-major, who is also Eichmann's personal escort, is to prevent lynching, murder or suicide, and to make sure that the prisoner cooperates willingly with his interrogators and examiners. On this score, there is no trouble at all. Eichmann is very cooperative, now that the game is up, and in addition to the personal interviews is supplying his captors with much written material. With dozens of publishers and the world's biggest magazines already bidding for Eichmann's confessions and memoirs, the Israel police have placed an exclusive copyright on his literary efforts, which are a property of the state.

The prisoner eats the same food as his guards. He does not even have his own plate or cup, and the meals are always switched at the last moment to prevent the possibility of poisoning attempts. There is one central kitchen in the fortress, which prepares food for all the guards, officers, investigators, interrogators, examiners, technical service staff — and for Eichmann. No one ever knows in advance which portion will be his.

The meals delivered to Eichmann's wing are distributed irregularly by the sergeant-major who eats together with Eichmann, from the same table, which is also used as a writing desk. The meat is cut up beforehand so that there is no need to use a knife. Needless to say, the food is kosher, as all police kitchens are under the strictest rabbinic supervision.

Whereas all personnel outside the isolation wing eat according to a fixed schedule, and have their duties blueprinted by orders and regulations to account for every moment of their time, Eichmann and his personal guards follow an erratic, irregular routine. For example, there is no reveille. The prisoner is allowed to sleep as late as he wants. His day starts whenever he gets up. Once, when Eichmann rose in the middle of the night, in the belief that it was morning (a strong patch of moonlight playing along the wall had misled him), he was served breakfast immediately. For him and his guards that day began at three in the morning.

On some days Eichmann gets up at noon, and the daily life starts then. Breakfast consists of a single hardboiled egg (shelled), a slab of margarine, cream cheese, porridge, sardines and coffee. Occasionally there is jam, tomatoes and cucumbers. After breakfast, Eichmann is conducted to the bathroom, his escort standing at his side all the time. He has his own toothbrush and safety-razor. Each day a new blade is inserted by the guard and taken away immediately after Eichmann has finished shaving himself. He combs his balding head and marches back to the cell.

Soon, other guards come and take him away for the five or six hours of daily grilling, examination and personal confrontations with witnesses. The interrogation sessions are conducted in a special windowless room, wired for sound and automatic photography. Personal confrontations with witnesses also take place in this room, which

NEW Z.O.A. HEAD

"It is because of this notion," he said, "that the whole Jewish institutional system of America, widely supported by Zionists and in many instances led by Zionists acting in individual capacities, has fallen under the domination of elements which are either anti-Zionist or lukewarm friends of Israel."

While Zionists have close cultural and spiritual ties with Israel, Mr. Bressler stressed, they have only one political allegiance — to the country in which they live.

The delegates adopted resolutions dealing with domestic and foreign issues, including one that lauded the declarations of friendship for Israel in the platforms of the two major American political parties.

Albert Schiff, president of the Jewish National Fund of America, the land-development arm of the World Zionist Organization in Israel, outlined plans for more land redemption programs in that country, says the New York Times. Mendel N. Fisher, the Fund's executive director, presided.

HOLTZMAN-GOLDBERG

The marriage of Miss Sema Goldberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Goldberg, 3735 Carlton Avenue, to Arnold Holtzman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Holtzman, 4698 Van Horne Avenue, took place on Sunday, September 18, at half-past six o'clock, at Adath Israel Synagogue. Rabbi Charles Bender officiated, assisted by Cantor E. Goldberger. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white silk taffeta, cut with a fitted bodice; boat-shaped neckline, long sleeves; and full bouffant skirt, draped at the back, with a chapel train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was fastened by a draped bow; and her flowers were white orchids, with white satin streamers. Mrs. Joseph Ryant, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, wearing a gown of midnight-blue organza, with matching lace. Her crown was of the same material; and she carried a cascade of white and blue carnations. Naomi Holtzman, sister of the groom, was flower girl, and wore a white organza dress, with a bodice of hand-embroidered daisies. She had a flowered crown; and carried a basket of rose petals. Saul Huberman, uncle of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Arnold Kibrick, Joseph Ryant, T. Broder, Melvin Zveig, Stanley Kassen, Harvey Fagen, B. Schachter, and Irving Choran. Standards of white, blue, and pink carnations, arranged with greenery, decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mrs. Goldberg, mother of the bride, wore a light blue, draped, peau de soie sheath; with hat of that material. Mrs. Holtzman, mother of the groom, was in a blue, silk, draped sheath; with a chiffon headdress of blue. Their corsages were of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Holtzman spent their wedding trip in Switzerland, Italy, and France. The bride went away in an olive-green, wool sheath, with checked jacket; and a corsage of pink carnations. They have taken up residence in Israel. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Goldberg, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Silver; all of Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. M. Ryant, of Ottawa, Ont.; Mrs. Abe Fleischer, and E. Rosen, of Israel.

A VISIT TO EICHMANN'S JAIL

is equipped for screening microfilms and slide projections of pictures. Conducting the examination is a team of trained officers and cross-examination experts, including electronics experts and technicians. Everything Eichmann says during these sessions is taken down by stenographers and is tape-recorded as well.

After the interrogation session, Eichmann returns to his cell for lunch, which usually consists of thick meat soup with potatoes, baked beans, boiled beef, goulash or hamburgers, rice or mashed potatoes, fruit salad or fresh fruit. He is then given his daily allotment of five cigarettes. If he wants to smoke, he asks the sergeant-major, who requests a lighter from one of the outside guards. The lighter is returned as soon as the cigarette is lit. Inside guards are not allowed to smoke, or keep matches, lighters, pen-knives, etc.

Following a brief after-lunch rest, Eichmann sits down at the desk and gets to work on his writing. (He covers, on the average, about 20 folio sheets a day.) The special ballpoint pens he uses are handed to him by the guards and taken away as soon as he signifies that he is done for the day. Eichmann's output is of a threefold nature: his confession, his personal memoirs, and the notes he is preparing for his defense in the forthcoming trial. At the end of each writing period, all the pages are removed to the central office. But Eichmann, is allowed, upon his request, to see his defense notes again. He is also allowed to see certain documents or eyewitness statements to help him "refresh" his memory.

As soon as he finishes writing, supper is served. The hour of this meal is again irregular, because sometimes Eichmann writes for two hours and sometimes for six or seven. The guards have to go hungry until he asks for food. Supper consists of bread, margarine, jam, cream cheese or yellow cheese, vegetable salad, and tea or coffee. A fried egg is served three times a week. There is gefilte fish on Friday night, and broiled chicken for the Sabbath lunch.

After supper, Eichmann performs his evening ablutions and returns to read in his cell. Since the ceiling light is never switched off, he is allowed to read for as long as he likes and go to sleep whenever he wants. And if his sleep is any way troubled by memories of his monstrous crimes, he has so far given no sign.

Cadillac For 1961 Presents New Styling, Greater Comfort, Accessory Advances In Elegance

The flagship of General Motors' 1961 line of automobiles, Cadillac, is shorter and higher, as well as completely restyled. Overall length is reduced to 222 inches (3 inches shorter than the previous model) in all but the 75 series, while the car's height has been increased from .1 to 1.7 inches. Cadillac's width remains the same.

Cadillac is offering 12 models, compared with 13 in 1960. A short-deck sedan will later be added to the Sixty-Two Series while the Eldorado Brougham and Eldorado Seville are dropped from the line. Although it has been discontinued, the influence of the classic Eldorado Brougham is reflected strongly in the 1961's completely new profile. The upper windshield structure has been redesigned, eliminating much of the wrap-around effect. A thinner roof line adds to the graceful silhouette which has a lean, elegant look.

In addition to overall length, wheelbase on all Cadillacs is reduced by one-half inch to 129.5 inches, except on the Seventy-Five model which retains its 149.8 inch wheelbase.

As a result of the engineering styling for 1961, the comfort dimensions are greatly improved, including ease of entry and exit, seating comfort, head room and leg room. The top of the door opening has been raised considerably, and there is a narrower rocker sill to step over. The front windshield pillar has been redesigned, eliminating the dog leg. Lower tunnels result from position changes of the engine and transmission.

In the rear compartment of the sedans, the rear door swings open an additional 7½ inches and is six inches wider. The narrower step-over sill adds inches to the usable width of the floor. Head room in the four-window Sedan and the Coupe has been increased by two inches over 1960. The Convertible has a different windshield from the rest of the line as windshield height has been lowered.

The design of the instrument panel is new and the covering materials eliminate glare and reflections. The handsome new panel is easier to read and controls for power-operated units are relocated for more convenient operation. The glove box is the new bin-type design; items cannot roll out.

The steering wheel is new and smaller in diameter (16 inches). The new windshield is cleaned by an exclusive Cadillac-designed wiper system with overlapping blades, leaving no center blind spot and wiping a 15 per cent larger area.

Some 113 harmonizing or contrasting upholstery combinations are available, an increase of 24 over last year. Materials range from the latest synthetic fabrics to the finest leathers and broadcloths. Even the trunk, which has an increased capacity of two cubic feet, has a new, more durable, tweed lining. Interiors of the exclusive Sixty Special feature wood paneling of Brazilian Rosewood on the door panels.

The redesigned frame is wider and shallower in the front section, allowing for a lower front floor. This permits the use of a newly-engineered front suspension which has a single lower control arm, controlling the fore and aft movement of the front wheels. The result is greater absorption of road bumps. On the rear suspension, the rubber mounting of the yoke to the frame is modified with a decrease in transmission of road noise and a softer ride.

The powerful Cadillac engine retains its compression ratio of 10.5 to 1 and the same cubic inch displacement of 390, including 325 horsepower. Additional improvements in ease of handling result from the increased boost from the new steering pump. Less effort is now required in steering or parking. Also, the car is more manoeuvrable — turning in a 43-foot circle, three feet less than last year.

Included among the 1961 accessory advancements are: a new rear window defogger; a new non-slip differential; and a crankcase ventilation kit (anti-smog device).

Statement On Religious Bigotry In The U. S. Election Campaign

The following statement was issued by the National Trade Union Council for Human Rights of the Jewish Labor Committee:

The National Trade Union Council for Human Rights of the Jewish Labor Committee is deeply concerned by the injection of the religious question in the Presidential campaign. At a time when the American people should be making decisions on the great matters of foreign and domestic policy that are placed before it, important and powerful groups of racists and bigots are confusing the issues by raising false and extraneous arguments about religious affiliations that have nothing to do with the qualifications for the Presidency.

The Constitution of the United States clearly and unambiguously states that "no religious Test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public Trust under the United States."

Both of the major candidates for the Presidency of the United States have stated their agreement with the Constitution, and have further stated that it is tragic that this question has even been raised. There have been proposals that the candidates stop talking about it. Unfortunately, this will not stop the discussion of religion in the campaign. While the candidates have pledged themselves to silence, fanatics, aided and abetted by bigots, continue to manufacture the words and phrases which inflame public debate on religion.

What is required is that both candidates clearly disavow and repudiate the support of any individual or group that attempts to win votes for any candidate on the basis of his religious affiliation. Only when it is clear that these groups have been officially and openly repudiated by both candidates will they be deprived of their mantles of pseudo-respectability and be relegated to the political underworld where they belong.

We further suggest that each candidate establish an internal watchdog committee of prominent religious and secular figures working in liaison with the other political camp so that any attempt to inject the religious test for candidacy for any public office may be promptly repudiated. It is of utmost importance that the brush fires of political crossburnings be stamped out at their source.

As Americans, as trade unionists, and as Jews, we urge that this be done at once. The American people should not be concerned with any candidate's religious affiliation, regardless of what it is. We are interested in a candidate's oath to uphold the laws of the land, and in his position on the public questions before us.

W.J.C. Seeks Survivors Of Nazi Crimes In Sluzk, Poland

World Jewish Congress success in helping to trace eye-witnesses to Nazi crimes has resulted in two more requests from West Germany prosecuting attorneys working on two different atrocity cases. Witnesses sought lived either in Bialystok or Sluzk, in Poland, and are requested to get in touch with Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, 15 East 84 Street, New York 28, N. Y.

The Bialystok ghetto, with its thousands of textile workers, was the scene of an abortive uprising. It was liquidated by the Nazis in 1943 and about 25,000 deportees were taken to such notorious camps as Treblinka, Majdanek, Blizyn, and Auschwitz, where the majority was massacred. Survivors of the ghetto or of the annihilation camps are sought by the Central Office for Investigation of War Crimes at Ludwigsburg, West Germany, in connection with an investigation.

The Sluzk witnesses are wanted to provide evidence for an investigation being carried out into crimes perpetrated by a Nazi Police Battalion that had its headquarters in Minsk, and in particular by two former officers of the unit, Franz Lechthaler and Willy Papenkort. The massacre of the Jews in Sluzk for which the two are responsible took place on October 27, 1941.

The investigating judge in Kassel, Germany, has traced a number of witnesses but they are mostly members of the police unit involved. The authorities have asked the World Jewish Congress to help locate Jewish survivors of the town of Sluzk who may have first-hand knowledge of the atrocities perpetrated at that time.

Farband Labor Zionist Order New Year Message

The following message was issued by the Farband Labor Zionist Order, in New York, and signed by Meyer L. Brown, president, and Louis Segal, general secretary:

The Farband Labor Zionist Order extends its cordial wishes for a happy New Year to the American Jewish community and to the Jewish people throughout the world. It is our devout wish that this year bring to the United States enlightened leadership in the perilous days which lie ahead. We pray, particularly, that the election campaign of 1960 be free of religious prejudice and bigotry and that all American express their free choice on the basis of the candidates' qualifications and record.

We hope that the New Year will be of continued growth and development for the State of Israel and one in which peace will come, at last, to the troubled Middle East. Stability can only come to this critical part of the world if the United States takes a firm stand against Arab acts of economic boycott, political blackmail, and aggression against the State of Israel.

Our sympathy goes out, at this holiest period of the Jewish calender, to the Jews of the Soviet Union and other countries of oppression. We hope that to them the New Year will bring freedom to practice the Jewish religion, to create cultural institutions, and to be able to live in accordance with the Jewish tradition.

"We also express the hope that broken families in the Soviet Union will be able to migrate to other countries and be reunited with their relatives. We hope that during the year 5721, Soviet Jewry will be able to establish meaningful contact with the free Jewish communities of the world for a creative Jewish life.

We pray that the coming year will be one of cultural achievements for the American Jewish community and that American Jewry will assume the great responsibility of leadership which has fallen upon it.

emergency which has reunited it with its dark-skinned Oriental brethren. They will have daily experience of a nation which is happy to share its technological and administrative know-how without imposing ideological commitments or exacting military alliances.

If they attribute this to the enlightened self-interest of a beleagured nation that needs friends desperately, that is enough. Even enlightened self-interest is a boon in the context of the dark, compulsive, suicidal mania of international politics today. But some of the representatives of these new nations, where religion is strongly diffused in the very climate of their being, insist on seeing this sharing as part of the Messianic tradition of Israel. They see the training period within Israel and the sending forth of Israeli technicians to their groping lands as the modern day fulfillment of the promise that the Torah shall go forth from Zion and the word of God from Jerusalem.

Like Joshua of old, Histadrut goes forth unafraid and strengthened, having sighted from the pinnacle of its own remarkable achievements the certain contours of the universal land of promise, the land where Jerusalem and all the cities of peace may be built without walls.

Call For Registration Of Former Jewish Slave Laborers In Germany

Former Jewish inmates of Nazi concentration camps, who toiled as slave laborers for private German firms, are requested to register by the Committee of Former Jewish Slave Laborers in Germany, which was set up in cooperation with leading national and world Jewish organizations. The Committee has its principal office in New York.

The Committee is seeking to gain compensation from German firms for the benefit of their surviving Jewish slave laborers, along the same lines as are provided by the agreements reached with the I. G. Farben and the Friedrich Krupp companies. The Committee desires to register the surviving slave laborers, so that they might not be excluded from the benefits of any future settlements and may be reached.

It is in the claimants' own interest, the Committee emphasized, to give the matter their immediate attention, and to register by December 31, 1960. The Committee makes no charge for its services, nor does it act as a legal representative of individual claimants. Communications should be addressed to the Compensation Treuhand GmbH, Staufenstrasse 29a, Frankfurt a/Main, Germany, and should contain the following information:

Full name, address, date and place of birth, name of German firm, and the place and dates where the slave labor was performed. The Compensation Treuhand GmbH is a special trust set up to administer the funds to be paid out under the I. G. Farben and the Krupp agreements.

Former slave laborers at the I. G. Farben and the Friedrich Krupp companies, who have already registered with the Compensation Treuhand, are requested not to register again, as their claims are already on file. Slave laborers at other companies, who were in previous correspondence with the Committee of Former Jewish Slave Laborers at its New York office, need not register again, at this time.

Everyone wants to save and be able to enjoy a happier and richer life.

TO HELP CANADIANS SAVE, each year the Canadian Government offers residents of this country the opportunity to build up their savings through Canada Savings Bonds.

MORE THAN TWO MILLION CANADIANS have saved over three billion dollars in this safe, convenient way.

THE GREAT POPULARITY of Canada Savings Bonds comes from their unusual features:

- They are simple to buy, for cash or on monthly installments, or you can get them on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.
- They are available in units ranging from $50 to $5,000.
- Anyone may hold them (even children) up to a limit of $10,000 of the new series.
- They pay interest in annual coupons, or in the case of fully registered bonds, by cheque.
- They can be cashed anytime at any bank, for their full face value, plus interest.
- They are really like dollars with interest coupons attached. Simply fill in your name on the back of the bond and get your money.
- They are fully guaranteed by the Government of Canada.
